

THE TRUTH
ACCORDING TO PAUL

www.ttatp.com

Paul Heinlein

INTRODUCTION & TESTIMONY

It is an honor and a pleasure to introduce myself to you. I feel that this is important because Satan will work very quickly to discredit my credibility and character in order to attack the biblical truths that God has helped me to discover and share with you.

You are obviously reading this because you like to know more information about who I am in order to establish if God would choose someone like myself to carry out this important work. I can inform you right now that I am not the embodiment of perfection, and that I do not consider myself the ideal person to present this work anymore. But nonetheless God has chosen me, and therefore we need to make the best of it.

To share with you my background I was born in England and raised as Roman Catholic. I became non-practicing before my teenage years, but I always continued to maintain respect towards God. I loathed school, and therefore I barely attended. However, I excelled in information technology in a time when computers first began appearing in classrooms, to the extent of being the person the teachers would turn to for help and therefore being put in charge of the computers in their departments, and also writing computer software such as a game, an operating system and a login security system.

I always maintained a curiosity towards scientific discoveries, especially those that attempted to explain the makeup of our universe. I was never one that went looking for trouble, but when trouble found me, I would eventually face it head-on. Although my mother loved me dearly, she was never around with me being the youngest of four children, with one in particular requiring a lot of attention, and also working multiple jobs due to the bankruptcy of my father's company. Because of that I became emotionally independent and lacked normal emotional empathy and love towards others.

My childhood home was unsavory. I quite literally grew up in a war zone, my oldest brother would terrorize us, he would lay in wait with booby-traps and regularly attempted to shoot at us with an air rifle. Before the age of ten I had to undergo surgery on my leg to remove a slug that he fired at me. He would steal my sister's barbie dolls to use as target practice and blow them up with explosives.

On a regular basis I was exposed to alcoholism, adult content, illegal drug use and other criminal behavior such as him selling illegal drugs to strangers out of his bedroom. Despite this, to this day I consider myself law-abiding, and I have never at any time consumed any illegal drugs, took up smoking or consume alcohol on a regular basis, but I am however in recovery from the pornography.

Things only became far worse when he permanently went off the reservation, there was no escape because even after I persuaded my parents for only us to live at a second property, he would on a nightly basis escape the insane asylum to visit in the dead of night, waking us all up to gain entry and being violent, and one time knocking out my mother's teeth because she got in between us when he attempted to punch me.

Because of my natural talent in computer hardware, networking and programming I was able to skip college and university, and proceed immediately to practicing this as a full-time career. This allowed for my independence and to live by myself. During this time, I experimented with lucid dreaming, married my long-distance overseas girlfriend and founded my own software company that is still producing software to this day.

In hindsight I married my girlfriend before we were ready, and that was the fault of the British Immigration system that made it difficult for her to visit and for us to live together without being married. When another company I was working for was forced to close due to the European Union promising a grant, and later withdrawing it last minute I was made redundant and because my wife was homesick, we decided to resettle in Canada.

A couple of years later I stumbled across a video on the Internet of what appeared to be a live NASA broadcast that showed a swarm of UFOs in space. The viewing of this video prompted me to investigate and question everything. I found that these same looking UFO objects have appeared throughout history, that an identical looking UFO had landed and visited an African tribe hundreds of years ago and shared a tale similar to Jesus being crucified, and that evil secret societies are embedded everywhere in government, religious institutions, universities and large corporations.

This understanding allowed me to tap into overlapping messages being echoed by a popular Seventh-day Adventist speaker. I was never able to share this journey of discovery with my wife, she was not interested and especially when it later involved Christian preachers because of her rejection of anything to do with God. At this point in my life my marriage broke down for unrelated reasons. When I resumed this research, I was in a new relationship and unlike my ex-wife, my new girlfriend took a large interest, and we continued this journey together.

Being armed and convinced with this new discovery of truth I put together my first pamphlet with the main purpose of sharing with others of what I independently believe the truth to be, and with multiple references cited to support every statement, so that the reader can verify the sources and judge for themselves the accuracy of the research.

A short while later we began attending a Seventh-day Adventist church because the church was sitting on a wealth of knowledge and has a community of people that I assumed were on a similar level, and that was correct to some degree. But nonetheless we were warmly welcomed, put together with a bible study mentor, and began studying and practicing the faith.

Many months later I was briefly exposed to the idea of a lunar Sabbath. And quite honestly after a bit of research, and falling back against Seventh-day Adventist sources that claimed it made no sense because sometimes you would have an eight-day week, I agreed, dismissed it and forgot all about it.

After the passage of more time, one day at church the pastor gave a sermon saying that when we pray, we should try to have a two-way conversation with God. I took the pastor's advice to heart, and during the night that followed I prayed together with my girlfriend and told God that if there was anything I needed to know, that he had my permission to invade my dreams. I chose dreams as the medium because of my past experiences with lucid dreaming and my ability to remember dreams.

That same night I dreamt of being by the coast, aboard an old galleon ship sliced in half that was functioning as a modern-day hotel resort. I was in the restaurant area of the hotel, and I met an old woman. And I was going to do what I instinctively did back then, which was to share the truth with people. But before I had a chance to tell this woman about the Saturday Sabbath, she told me that the man of sin was after her because she keeps the lunar Sabbath. And right after she had told me this, she was chased away by a man that I perceived was Satan.

This dream prompted me to give the lunar Sabbath theory another examination. I realized that it did not cause there to sometimes be an eight-day week because the New Moon days were not part of the week. I found scriptural verses supporting that notion, and that the moon plays a significant role in determining appointed times. I also learnt about the flaws with using the Gregorian calendar, particularly how the International Date Line (IDL) was arbitrarily drawn by men on the map, and how it has been realigned to improve trade among Islands, and how travel alone can cause you to gain or lose an entire day by crossing an invisible boundary. And so, if Saturday is indeed the Sabbath, is Saturday actually Saturday where you currently live? On the Gregorian calendar, with those flaws and arbitrary non-biblical establishment of the International Date Line, I would say that alone was a serious credibility problem.

This research was just preliminary, and only scratching the surface. But it was enough to know that there was something more to the subject. And so, I waited until the next church service, and after the pastor gave another sermon, this time ironically on the subject of not keeping traditions over truth I arranged for a meeting with the pastor, elders, my bible study mentor and some other church members. At this meeting which occurred after the service I shared my story that God had communicated back to me, and my initial findings indicating there was something here. Everyone was surprised, and the consensus was to allow a week for everyone to research the matter themselves and to reconvene after the next upcoming church service.

After a week had passed, the general vibe I received was that everyone was too busy to give this any of their attention. There was a claim that this dream came from Satan, and another had long ago prayed for answers on this subject, but accused me of fabricating the story, but is now of the opinion that it needs to be properly tested by the church.

I was therefore forced to continue the research on my own because I did not have the support of my church. And when I encountered difficulties determining which day began the start of the month, I received another dream from God showing me the crucifixion of Jesus, and it was narrated to me that he died on the full moon. This new insight allowed me to complete the first version of my thesis on the subject.

The research and writing of this thesis was occurring during a hard time in my life. I was going through a difficult divorce settlement, preparing my tax returns, and more than a year ago I took on a massive project at work that was too large for one person to keep on schedule. Then this was further compounded with my father suffering a heart attack that prompted me to return to England to be by his bedside at the hospital.

While in England, I took the opportunity to visit another Seventh-day Adventist church, and during a bible study I was invited to speak and share my testimony. And I shared with them my story concerning the dream I received from God and where the research was leading, but I was being constantly interrupted and was not allowed to finish. The vibe I was receiving was that they wanted nothing to do with it, saying no thank you, we don't want to be a break-away church that burns down with people inside, and that this was not the appropriate place to discuss this subject.

In the passing days I was finding it more difficult to sleep, at best only getting a couple of hours of sleep each day. I was completely oblivious to the danger I was putting myself into because I felt like I was on mission and invincible. I inadvertently fell into Satan's snare, but thankfully with the support of my girlfriend, bible mentor, family, friends and the church I was only held hostage for a few short days.

At the conclusion I received a vision from God that Satan is simply a spoiled brat that meddles without invitation into the lives of others, that people are under a trance and not living the way God intended. And I briefly found myself on a tropical island fighting with a love rival over a woman. And then God revealed to me that love is the key, and that I was missing it. And the cloud of confusion that I was under for many days was instantly lifted. The doctors were unable to diagnose me with anything, and I did not require to be medicated, and nothing like this has ever happened since.

Quite simply I was spiritually attacked by the enemy, exactly as warned by the old woman in the dream I received from God. When I returned to Canada, I was scolded by my bible mentor for running before learning to walk. For not being grounded enough in the word, and for not equipping myself with the full armor of God. It was, and still is, my belief that Satan will later use this incident in the future to discredit my credibility by slurring my character that I am unstable.

Later that year my girlfriend and I prepared ourselves to be baptized into the church, and I worked with a visiting pastor to resolve the question of the Sabbath. After much discussion I was presented with a verse that I had not considered before, it was from Leviticus chapter twenty-three, verses fifteen and sixteen. It appeared to clearly state that the day after the passing of seven weeks would be numbered the fiftieth day. This to me at the time was just simply put and concluded the whole matter. I conceded that I was wrong, and we both got baptized the next day, and I married my girlfriend early the next year and later legally adopted her son from a previous marriage.

At the church I was ridiculed for being wrong and for leading people astray, but I was of the opinion regardless of who was right or wrong, the matter needed to be properly researched in order to obtain the proof of where the truth actually lies.

The year that followed I received another dream from God. He revealed to me that I would walk away from an unrighteous religious movement blameless. I was shown my autobiography and it included moments from my past. It was surprisingly accurate and powerful, and contained the three angels' message. I then found myself repeating previous testimony that I no longer believed was truth at the time, and so in the dream I stopped myself from continuing. However, I was forced to continue reading aloud the testimony regardless of my desire to stop by two angels that appeared.

I put together a short document that disproved the lunar Sabbath and published it on a Seventh-day Adventist forum where it gained attention and debate. On this forum I relentlessly debated with an opponent that believed in the lunar Sabbath, to the point where I found problems with my own argument.

If Leviticus chapter twenty-three, verses fifteen and sixteen is proof that the day after the duration of seven weeks is exactly fifty days, this causes a new problem. Which is, when you follow the instructions to determine the day of Pentecost on a calendar with no fixed week cycle, the day after the seventh Sabbath and the fiftieth day are not always the same day each year! Therefore these instructions cannot be followed on a calendar without a fixed week cycle, and that Leviticus was really saying that you must count complete lunar weeks (that excludes the New Moon days), not cycles of only seven days.

So I found myself back in my old position, except this time I was working with a devout former Seventh-day Adventist study partner, that strongly believed that the book of Jubilees, book of Enoch and book of Jasher were inspired scripture. And having access to this new material, which I initially treated as suspect and dangerous, I found it harmonized and shed a lot more light on much of the traditional bible.

For example the traditional bible teaches that God desires us to rest on his Sabbath day in order for it to be kept holy, that God does not change his mind, and that he would never contradict himself by giving an order that would violate his own law. Yet, he ordered an attack on the city of Jericho that spanned seven days. This would obviously involve a contradiction of God's own nature because it would profane the Sabbath day, but according to the book of Jasher, this order was instead given on the day of the New Moon. This is significant because according to lunar Sabbath teachings, the New Moon day is not part of the week, and therefore the fighting would have been concluded on the day before the Sabbath and would not be in violation of God's own law.

It is discoveries like these that prove that the lunar Sabbath harmonizes with scripture, and that other inspired religious scripture exists outside the traditional bible. For example, if the book of Jasher was a forgery, how can you forge something and make it harmonize with a forgotten bible truth that nobody in the era of when such forgery was created, knew about? The answer was clear to me, the book is obviously not a forgery.

And one day whilst entertaining Jehovah Witnesses in my home, claiming that Jesus was not God, my new wife abruptly shut them down. I did not care myself, for me no topic is off limits. And many weeks later I stumbled across a series of videos that I watched which attempted to expose the trinity deception. And so I decided to begin a new study to answer this question, and it involved what the founders of the Seventh-day Adventist church originally believed, and how this "old Trinitarian absurdity" (which they referred to it as) became church doctrine. I discovered that the bible codex when compared against other branches revealed tampering, and that bible translations were also deliberately manipulated or interpreted to promote this false doctrine.

And when I involved my study partner, I was surprised to learn that he had already concluded long ago that the trinity was a lie. Not only that but he got the impression from reading the book of Jasher and the book of Enoch that Jesus was actually Enoch! And armed with this new theory, I sought out the evidence from the traditional bible to prove if this was indeed true. And to my surprise, I found many such verses that seem to backup this theory such as John chapter three, verse thirteen where Jesus claimed that no one has ascended up into heaven except himself who came back down from heaven! Right there, in this one verse Jesus made the claim that he was a man on earth before, and he ascended up into heaven, and then came back down to dwell among us.

It also became my understanding that yes, Jesus is the son of God. But so was Adam, because his father was God, therefore by that logic we are all sons of God, as we are his descendants. And ironically because Enoch was Noah's grandfather, we are therefore all direct descendants of Jesus by blood line as it was Noah's line that repopulated the world after the great flood.

At the conclusion of this study God revealed to me in a dream that the reason why these books were not part of the bible is because when a scholar made the same discovery a long time ago, it outraged the Roman Catholic church to such an extent that they sought to remove all references that could be used to substantiate it.

Unfortunately just like the lunar Sabbath, my church was not interested in this discovery, nor researching it or verifying if there is any truth to it. I was accused of being unteachable, and that was why nobody wanted to study with me. However, one person did privately admit they believed Jesus was not God, but they were afraid of losing their paid position if they were to speak out in my support.

There were complaints as to why I had not already been disfellowshipped. There were accusations that it was because of the size of my tithe, that the church did not want to lose that income. Regardless, it was clear that our doctrinal differences were too great to remain together, and I felt it would be hypocritical to continue attending a church service that constantly referred to Jesus as God, and wrongly claiming the day was the Sabbath. So just like it was revealed in the dream, it turns out that the unrighteous religious movement that I walked away from as actually the Seventh-day Adventist church, and I would be repeating past testimony in support of the lunar Sabbath.

Upon further research on the lunar Sabbath using the new material from the book of Jubilees, I found the conclusive proof that settles the matter. The book explained the purpose behind Pentecost, that it was the only day once in the year that the people could either enter a new covenant with God or renew an existing covenant. Not only that, but it also clearly states the date of Pentecost. It claims the day that the Israelites departed Egypt and arrived at Mount Sinai to enter into a new covenant with God was on the day of Pentecost, and that this occurred on the sixteenth day of the third month. It makes the same claim about the day Noah entered into a covenant with God, with rainbows serving as the reminder of this new promise. It also claims that Abraham celebrated it in the middle of the third month, and that Jacob also celebrated it on the sixteenth day of the third month.

The significant thing about this conclusive proof is that you do not need to rely on the book of Jubilees to prove it. There is enough scripture in the traditional bible that clearly establishes that covenants with God were only entered into or renewed on the day of Pentecost, and that day was in the third month. The exact date can be determined from the book of Exodus, as the Israelites first arrived at Mount Sinai on the fifteenth day of the third month, and on the next day they began to enter into a new covenant with God.

And therefore, if Pentecost is fixed to the sixteenth day of the third month, and you can arrive at the day of Pentecost by counting seven complete weeks from the day of first fruits, which is actually fixed to the twenty-third day of the first month. That this is only possible by counting lunar weeks that skip over new moon days, and any attempt to do otherwise will never bring you to celebrate Pentecost in the middle of the third month for the fiftieth day because the fiftieth day would always occur far too early.

This new information was the final piece to complete my lunar Sabbath research, and because it was so simplistic I decided to abandon updating my thesis that was already at twenty-six pages, and to instead simply incorporate my latest findings into the single sheet pamphlet that I had already begun a long time ago that was dedicated to this subject. This has remained my strategy because when publications span too many pages, they become too intimidating because of the amount of time required to invest in reading, understanding and verifying the accuracy of the information.

During the time outside the church I have continued to embark on studies whenever I would find something that arouses my interest. I try to avoid rumors and things that cannot be proven. For example, I feel in my gut that the Jewish temple in Jerusalem was not located at the Dome of the Rock, that the Dome of the Rock was instead the location of an old Roman fort because the location lacked access to fresh water which was required for washing during the ceremonies, and that the Jewish temple was likely located at the old city of David that contained the only natural spring in the area. And I also feel in my gut that when Jesus was crucified, after the earthquake when he was pierced, that his blood dripped down a crack in the ground that opened up and splashed upon the Ark of the Covenant that was located in a cave directly below. Because this is what the high priest was instructed to do with the blood of animals that were sacrificed. But neither of these can be proven so I excluded them.

I also went through a time of self-discovery and turmoil in my new marriage. As I had earlier written, because of my troubled upbringing I never learnt to love, nor experienced love, and I am not referring to lust or a crush. And whilst I was vacationing, I experienced this for the first time when I met someone. And I knew pursuing this would cause problems, and these problems I wrestled with in my mind against what I knew the law allows and what Jesus taught. And I concluded because she was not a married woman, and provided I did not divorce my current wife to be with her, that it would be lawful for me to pursue her according to the marriage laws dictated by God himself, written down in Leviticus eighteen, verse eighteen. Because Jesus claimed he did not come to abolish or change the laws, and he only considered marrying another woman as adultery if you divorce (replace) your current wife to be with her.

Over time God provided guidance, and told me for my salvation sake that I must one day marry this new woman that I had met, and revealed I would also need to go rescue her. I realized that this was God's plan for me all along because when I had the vision in England, he had shared with me that I would be competing against a love rival over a woman from a tropical island, and that I was missing love which was the key. And if this love was my girlfriend at the time (whom is now my current wife), how could I be missing it?

But this is why I no longer consider myself the ideal person to present this work anymore, it simply brings too much controversy that Satan will use to discredit the message by attacking the messenger delivering the truth. People today in the western world are living with the traditions and customs of the Roman Catholic church, and even though they are not bible teachings, they are considered socially unacceptable to violate them in today's world, even though everything else that is sinful is acceptable and lawful such as same sex marriage, adultery, swinging and changing your sex. So I do not see why it is so terrible that there could be consenting adults living supposedly today in what is considered a free and open society that want to be in such a marriage by choice.

And while nothing has advanced yet, this is what I want and I know this is where my life is heading, and it is also what God has revealed what I should do, and also what will happen. And so, it is what it is. And it has been very difficult for my current wife to handle and accept, and if I could love her like I was expected to, and I was not directed by God to do this, I would not be planning to do this. And because I agreed to have a child with her, we had a son together despite all this going on.

The last study that I embarked on liberated me because for the longest amount of time, particularly because of the writings of Ellen G. White, I felt like I could never keep God's ten commandment laws, or continually maintain a righteous lifestyle at all times. It was soul crushing because it was so futile. However, during this study I learnt that the ten commandment laws were now only to serve as a guide for us, and that the only people that are still subject to those laws are those that have rejected Jesus.

The apostle Paul wrote on this subject at great length in both the book of Galatians and the book of Romans, comparing any attempt to keep the law as pointless and that you can never win God's approval by keeping the law. For the law cannot save you, it will only condemn you. He compared Isaac and Ishmael, saying Ishmael was born a slave and subject to the law just like the Jews, but as Christians we are like Isaac, born free and not subject to the law.

So in other words those that are being led by the spirit do not have to worry about keeping the law. We win God's approval by having faith in Jesus, that he died for our sins. If we simply follow the practice of loving God and loving others, we are fulfilling the principle of the law. And that we should resist any attempts by others to put us back into bondage by trying to convince us that we should go back to keeping the law. Quite literally as Jesus claimed, the truth really does set you free.

It has been my desire for the longest amount of time to share with the Seventh-day Adventist church my testimony and my research on the lunar Sabbath. In the past it was not possible because of the resistance, rejection and censorship within the church, and although I was always planning to circumvent that, it was not the right time, nor was the research mature and conclusive enough when I first started to attempt to do that.

However, I now know that the time is now because this time, the fourth quarter of 2021 was chosen by God. And so if you are reading this testimony because your church received a copy of my lunar Sabbath pamphlet, just know that you are one of ten thousand one hundred Seventh-day Adventist churches around the world that also received a copy, in either English, French or Spanish.

It is my hope that my lunar Sabbath pamphlet will get into the right hands at every church that God has chosen to receive this new light. And I say to those people, that you are now the gatekeepers. You have the responsibility to verify the accuracy of the information, and if you believe it to be the truth, it is your duty to share it with your congregation. Otherwise, you will be like the Pharisees that Jesus spoke about that have the light, and neither enter themselves, nor allow those entering to enter as well. I believe that I have fulfilled my responsibility for the time being, by advancing the work to this point, and it is now your responsibility to continue the advancement and be one of the many repairers of the breach by sharing with others the message of the little scroll.

My work for God will not end here, for I have suspected for many years now exactly where this is leading me personally. I do hope that you all prepare for the time of tribulation. I was told by God that now is the time to start preparing to leave (the cities) and be self-sufficient without money. It is my own prediction that you will only have three and a half years to prepare for the mark of the beast after the announcement of the construction of the Jewish temple in Jerusalem, and I predict that announcement will occur on the one hundred and twentieth jubilee which is around 2025, which is the end of the six-thousand years in the seven-thousand year bible pattern.

It is my sincere desire for you to have and believe the truth, I believe that this is the truth, but if it is not, my desire is still the same. I go wherever the truth is proven to be, and this is why in my past I flip-flopped around. Because to me, it wasn't about being right or my pride, it was all about the truth, and only the truth.

May you prove all things and walk in the light,

Paul Heinlein
18 December 2021